@decontigiovanni

Hi, I'm Giovanni,
Product and Visual design student at IUAV
University of Venice, aiming to be a service designer one day.

I'm also the founder of Unposted90s, a Youtube
Channel where, with a friend of mine, we talk about fashion topics and related contents and where I curate the Art Direction and the Management, a few months ago we reached 10.000 subscribers.

🇪🇺 Between 2022-2023 I went to Köln,
Germany as Erasmus exchange student at KISD International University where I had the occasion to develop projects and where I finally had the chance to test my ability in an International environment.

🧠 Particularly interested into understanding relations that revolves around the design discipline and today society, with a special attention for economic and philosophy.

BeeSmart

team project

Brief → Starting from 2023 WGSN report, the group had to design a business focusing on western society market trends, highlighting reference field, using design thinking and service design methodologies in order to put together a realistic presentation and prospective of the business.

Duration: 4 months
Type: Team project
Grade: 2nd year
Role: Service designer

BeeSmart

An organized ecosystem of work and family.

An holistic approach

BeeSmart is a smartworking space with the option of childcare. This will enable new parents to reconcile work and family life while avoiding their overlap. BeeSmart aims to be a hub for smartworking workers. It presents itself as a welcoming and attractive environment for all those smartworkers, new parents or people with the prospect of becoming one.

The process

From WGSN report to our solution.

Starting from the WGSN survey, we chose to analyse profiles of people marked by the sentiment of tragic optimism working in smartworking. Analysing the field through pestel analysis and its possible future trends with the help of the Futures Wheel, we found how time management and the size of physical spaces greatly influence the organisation of work and people's lives. This holistic view then allowed us to draw a clear map of workers' needs and expectations.

We went on to purposely interview 25 people with a similar profile to the one we selected from the WGSN research, once collected we summarised this into two main personas.

Valerio24 years		Desires
		• Computer engineer • Smartworker • Home worker • Suffers from loneliness • Alienating space	Separation between working area and bedroom Ergonomic enviroment To have a quiet space where to work
⌕Pains He's missing a contact with the outside world He's missing a space where having just work He needd a chat with the other between the breaks		✓Gains To evolve his own indipendence A space where just work To have a quiet space well illuminated

Alice32 years		Desires
		• Senior Architect • She mainly work in smartworking • She has a newborn son • She likes fitness	Having an help in order to manage the kid's life. To know other new parents. To have a space only dedicated to her job.
⌕Pains She focus differently between home and office Being a parent means having two jobs She is scared for her working career.		✓Gains Smartworking helps her saving time.

Packages

Subscriptions options.

Based on the collected qualitative data and personas, we decided to create four main offer packages for our customers, trying to build a competitive option for a given need.

Saving time is crucial.

In a world like ours, saving time and having a good relationship with time is crucial. We also know that we probably lose it in the way we spend our days and nights. On social media, productivity because

As we said before, the whole environment is organized and designed to attract and tempt us. It is interesting to note that from various reports and videos you can see that it is getting worse. When you ask people directly how much time they spend on their phone per day, now they answer each time before actually checking their phone, an average of two hours less than the actual time. We want to point out for this reality that we live in a world that is presented to us as full of opportunities and projections. A world where the value of time is increasingly only associated with productivity, with work, and does not mention leisure and less the great even education at role that time spent discovering oneself has, to meet in peace to

The phone is no longer a phone, but once placed on the table it changes its meaning and becomes a watch with a minimal, clean sensible, balanced presence.
